RITUAL ETCHINGS: THE EXPERIMENTAL SHORTS OF ERIC PATRICK KICKS OFF SOUTHERN TOUR OF INDEPENDENT FILMMAKERS SERIES AT THE KENTUCKY CENTER

Ritual Etchings: The Experimental Shorts of Eric Patrick will serve as the inaugural film of the new Southern Tour of Independent Filmmakers series on Wednesday, September 5, 7 p.m. at The Kentucky Center in Clark-Todd Hall. The film screening will be followed by audience discussion with the filmmaker hosted by Tamara Lee Fulkerson, Director of the Bluegrass Independent Film Festival.

In partnership with Hart-Lunsford Pictures, Kentucky Center Presents brings the new film series, which will include six films with appearances by the filmmakers themselves and audience discussion after each screening.

Ritual Etchings: The Experimental Shorts of Eric Patrick represents ten years of the filmmaker's work. The films address a variety of issues such as the hectic pace of modern life explored through time lapse photography in Ablution, and the "changes in consciousness that happen during driving long distances," explored through cinematic collage in Stark Film. Patrick's focus on low-tech, traditional, film-based techniques to explore these ideas results in films filled with eerily beautiful visuals that evoke a surreal, otherworldly feel which is complemented by the absence of a traditional narrative throughout Patrick's films.
